SEASONAL FARM EDUCATOR

About Amber Waves Farm

Amanda Merrow and Katie Baldwin founded Amber Waves Farm in 2009. They now grow 250 varieties of organic fruits and vegetables, maintain a flock of 100 laying hens, and have revived the cultivation of organic wheat on the East End. They have also made education a central part of their mission and work with local schools to introduce children to the basics of farming. Amber Waves Farm offers a CSA membership and sells its products at local farmers markets.

Job Description

Amber Waves Farm seeks high-energy, detail-oriented, fun-loving team players/educators to join our education team for the Summer & Fall 2024 seasons. We are looking for current teachers, assistant teachers, camp counselors, or educators with at least 1 + year of experience working with children in a classroom or outdoors. Morning and afternoon shifts are available. Some weekend work is required.

Our program caters to young children under the age of four in addition to weekly classes for tweens, teens, parents and family members of all ages. Using our science-based curriculum, we are looking for team players passionate about offering the public creative ways to understand the local food system, connect children to the natural world, and teach children where their food comes from and how it is grown.

Work Schedule & Compensation

- Schedule: Full-time or part-time, seasonal
- Compensation: Salary, $18-$22 DOE plus pick your own vegetables, flowers and herbs
- Housing is not available
- Start Date: June 17th, 2024
