ALLER AQUA'S HISTORY

The story of Aller Aqua began many years ago at Aller Mill. Aller Mill is today called Aller Aqua and is a family-owned company, directed by Anders Carøe Bylling, son of Hans Erik Bylling, Aller Aqua's Group President, and grand-grandson of master journeyman Frederik Bylling, who came to the mill in 1910 and, in cooperation with his wife, took over the mill in 1912. Ever since then, it has been a member of the Bylling family who has led the company. Through wartimes and peace, through crisis and wealth, the mill has survived both good and bad times.

The mill and the business have grown with time. Fish feed production became an independent business in 1996, and today, Aller Aqua is the third largest producer of fish feed in Europe. We have factories in seven countries and sell feed in more than 70. As a company, we are big enough to meet your needs but smaller than the biggest producers, and this is exactly what makes us flexible, ready for change, decisive, and able to react quickly to our customers' changing needs.

Our long history guarantees that we know what we are talking about, that we keep our promises, and that we are right here—now and for many years to come.

HIGH QUALITY FEED FOR AQUACULTURE

The background is a classical painting of a Dutch watermill. The mill is a two-story building with a thatched roof and a large wooden waterwheel on the left side. It is situated on a riverbank with a large tree to the right. The sky is blue with some clouds. A large white outline of a fish is superimposed on the left side of the image.
