HEIRLOOMS

Whether you're sitting down for lunch at a table dressed with an immaculate white cloth, drying off with a soft towel on deck, or settling in for a restful night in cool cotton sheets, linen impacts almost every part of life on board a superyacht.

From its workshop in the beautiful West Sussex countryside, Heirlooms has been manufacturing fine linens since 1984. Collaborating with leading Italian weavers, the family-run company sources the finest textiles - from silky, 1,000-thread-count cotton sateen to crisp, 800-thread-count Egyptian cotton percale. They are then transformed by its in-house team of skilled designers, cutters, machinists and embroiderers, who personally measure, stitch and check every item.

Creating bespoke linens for the British royal family, as well as private yacht owners, boutique hotels and renowned interior designers, Heirlooms is the only linen company to have been awarded royal warrants to both Her Majesty the Queen and HRH the Prince of Wales.

Prestige aside, as part of honouring its warrants, Heirlooms have been committed to sustainable practices for a number of years, implementing socially and environmentally conscious practices and encouraging its suppliers to do the same. By the end of 2020, Heirlooms aims to ensure 100 per cent of its cotton and textiles are responsibly sourced.

Heirlooms' offering for superyacht owners encompasses beautiful bedding for cabins, pure linen tablecloths cut precisely to fit a yacht's dining table, personalised deck towels, and cashmere throws. All of its linens can be personalised with a variety of contrast borders and piping, embroidered logos, lace detailing and bespoke colours to compliment a range of interior schemes. And thanks to state-of-the-art equipment built to its own specification, Heirlooms has complete flexibility over its production: essentially, if it can be stitched together, Heirlooms can make it. For bespoke designs, the manufacturer keep detailed records of every piece it has created for a client, including templates of mattresses and tables. So should extras or replacement linens be required, Heirlooms can match designs and materials precisely - even years later.

In addition to Heirlooms' bespoke service, its Home Collection features in-stock linens and made-to-order designs: classic, timeless styles that will always look, and feel, luxurious.

Superyacht linens have to work hard and be as practical as they are beautiful. At Heirlooms there is a palpable sense of pride in upholding the best of British craftsmanship: be it a custom embroidered bed linen set or carefully chosen matching accessories, you can always expect exceptional quality with Heirlooms. These are linens fit for royalty, after all.
