British craftsmanship at the heart of comfortable living

For nearly four decades, Heirlooms has quietly set the standard for bespoke linens in the world’s most remarkable spaces. At its West Sussex workshop, every item is cut, stitched and finished by a team of talented craftspeople whose expertise has been honed over many years. As part of a select few British manufacturers holding two Royal Warrants, Heirloom’s heritage is more than a story: it is a daily commitment to quality, service and the art of textile making.

Working with clients across yachts, residential homes (including ski lodges and private villas), the aviation sector and, most recently, a luxury sleeper train, the team combines precision and creativity to translate individual briefs into uniquely personal pieces while using well-considered fabrics to promote sleep. Sleep is a defining element of any home or onboard experience, and the right materials can have a profound effect on rest and recovery. Its percale, sateen and linen collections are designed to deliver exceptional softness, breathability and durability, helping to create a sleep environment that supports both health and enjoyment. Comfort and well-being will always stand as one core of Heirloom’s values.

Another core value is its passion for protecting and passing on textile skills. With a focus on developing craft expertise in the UK, Heirlooms is committed to inspiring the next generation. It partners with local schools, colleges and universities to offer work placements, hands-on experience and talks on careers in textiles. This engagement enthuses emerging talent and ensures the craftsmanship that defines the company’s work not only survives but thrives.

Innovation continues to drive Heirlooms forward. Alongside its classic ranges, the company is preparing to launch new fabrics and finishes in 2026, including a new range of piqués and an innovative weave of pure cotton and micromodal – a luxuriously soft fabric made from renewable beechwood. It feels like silk and has the breathability of cotton. Beechwood forests are a sustainable source of raw material as they multiply by rejuvenation. The trees propagate by themselves, meaning no artificial irrigation or planting is required. These new fabric developments allow our clients to experience advances in texture, performance and sustainability.

While fabrics are at the heart of every project for Heirlooms, another important element is design. Its team works closely with owners, designers and crew to develop schemes that complement their interior’s aesthetic, functional demands and, most importantly, their personality. From embroidery and monogramming to custom sizing and colour development, the process is collaborative and entirely bespoke.

As the expectations of yacht and private clients evolve, so does the team’s approach, but the essence remains the same: British-made linens crafted with care, innovation and generational skill. At Heirlooms, luxury is not simply supplied – it is made by hand to last. heirlooms-linens.com
