With two grandmothers who survived breast cancer, Dr. Fisher strongly believes in the value of emotional and practical support when facing such a diagnosis, which is why her patient care team includes breast cancer survivors who help patients navigate the restorative journey. She and her team are inspired daily as they work with patients on the journey to recovery, whether that be after cancer or to address loss of form and function due to pregnancy or aging.

Her artistry, skill and experience includes such breast reconstruction options as DIEP Flap (living tissue) reconstruction, implant-based and nipple-sparing reconstruction, and "hidden scar" techniques resulting in no scars on the front of the breast. She also offers the correction of problems with breast implants and cosmetic body-shaping procedures, such as tummy tucks and breast lifts.

Dr. Fisher graduated medical school with honors from the University of Texas and completed her training in plastic surgery and advanced reconstructive surgery in Pittsburgh, Penn., and Paris, France.

Upon returning home to Austin, Dr. Fisher joined the Medical Advisory Committee for the Breast Cancer Resource Center and has been a bra designer with Kendra Scott for the organization's signature fundraiser, Art Bra® Austin. She was also appointed faculty at the University of Texas Dell Medical School.

Dr. Fisher understands that restorative breast surgery represents a chance for not just physical healing, but also emotional healing. She and her team aspire to empower women every day to move forward in life—confidently.
