Grief after losing someone to substance use is a different kind of pain—one that often carries layers of heartbreak, unanswered questions, and isolation. Too many people suffer in silence, feeling like no one truly understands what they're going through.

This group was created so you don't have to carry that weight alone.

Together, we offer a safe, supportive, and judgment-free space where you can share your story, honor your loved one, and connect with others who truly understand this unique loss. Whether your loss is recent or years ago, your grief is valid—and you are welcome here.

You will find:

- ♥ Compassion and understanding
- ♥ Connection with others who have experienced similar loss
- ♥ A space to speak—or simply sit and be
- ♥ Support in navigating the journey of grief

There is no timeline for grief.
There is no "right" way to heal.

But there is strength in community.

♥ You are not alone. ♥
