Client Problem & Impact

Our telecoms client was experiencing challenges in understanding the link between the handset purchased by a customer and the value they were generating to ensure a positive return on investment.

This was a major problem as they had singular data sources which did not provide a holistic view of value.

How Did Sagacity Help?

Using our proprietary Value Based Management software and analytics capability, we imported multiple data sets which gave us a multi-dimensional view of customer value. We identified:

- the relative value of customers purchasing a handset from a specific manufacturer was significantly less than customers with comparable handsets from different manufacturers
- a specific handset was attracting customers that displayed attributes of low tenure and spend
- the true value of these customers which then enabled the client to enter negotiations with the handset manufacturer

Outcome & Business Benefits

£6m additional savings

Using our value model insights and evidence, our client was able to confidently re-negotiate additional handset subsidies with their supplier to increase their return on investment for 'low' value customers.
