Choose the right HR software for you

Still handling HR the old-fashioned way? Overflowing filing cabinets and desk drawers, and writing up your rotas on wall charts?

It's time to get with the times and that means simplifying and streamlining your HR with a modern software system. Here's how to choose the right one for you...

Essential questions to ask yourself

How many staff will use it?

Just because you're a small team now, doesn't mean you always will be. That's why you need HR software that lets you easily add new users.

What data do I want to collect?

Whether you want real-time absence updates or detailed reports at your disposal, your HR software should offer you both.

Who will be responsible for managing it?

There are HR systems that let you share some of your HR responsibilities with your managers—helping to take the pressure off you.

What level of security do I need?

It's vital that any software system you choose is cloud-based and secure. After all, it's going to hold all your business and employee data.

Do I want to access it outside of business hours?

Many HR software platforms now come with mobile apps to give you the option of managing HR requests on the go.

How much do I want to spend?

As most software providers offer different packages and payment options, you should be able to find one that's affordable and suitable for you.
