The Lawn at THE COMPLEAT ANGLER

The Compleat Angler started its life as a very small inn owned by Wethereds Brewery and was known as the "Riverside Inn", boasting some six rooms. Izaak Walton is believed to have written his world famous book on angling in and around Marlow in 1653 and it is from his book that the name of the inn was later taken.

The Compleat Angler was always a very popular and fashionable place frequented by the artists and intellectuals of the period – Edgar Wallace, Dame Nellie Melba, J M Barrie, Phil May, the famous Punch artist, Scott Fitzgerald, Noel Coward, Nancy Mitford and Tallulah Bankhead, plus many others.

In 1888, the landlord of The Compleat Angler was Mr Robert Kilby who subsequently bought the hostelry from the brewery in 1923. Mr Kilby was responsible for adding the restaurant on the site, which was vacated when the old wooden bridge was demolished and replaced by the suspension bridge built by Tierney Clarke. After Mr Kilby's death, Mrs Kilby continued to run The Compleat Angler, but in 1928 she sold it to Alfred Yarrow, the founder of Yarrow shipbuilders. On his death in 1932, he left the hotel to his daughter Lady Dawson, whose husband was then the king's physician. As Lord and Lady Dawson had no interest in running the "pub", their recently married daughter, Lady Bowater and her husband Sir Ian Bowater, persuaded Lord and Lady Dawson to let them "have a go". They continued to run and expand the hotel until June 1980 when they sold it to Trusthouse Forte Limited. In 1996, Trusthouse Forte sold The Compleat Angler to Granada, who then sold it in 2001 to Macdonald Hotels.

Internationally renowned for its beautiful location and high standards, the Compleat Angler remains a hotel frequented by royalty, celebrities and film stars – which have included the late Diana, Princess of Wales, Omar Sharif, Margot Robbie and Clint Eastwood, to name a few. On Thursday 24th June 1999, The Compleat Angler made history when Her Majesty the Queen ate out, for the very first time, at a public restaurant outside London – albeit at a private function. His Excellency, Arpad Goncz, the President of Hungary, invited the Queen, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh and Prince of Wales, to be his guests at The Compleat Angler. The hotel was chosen not only because of its powerful reputation for quality coupled with absolute discretion, but also because of its unrivalled view of Marlow Bridge and the River Thames

William Tierney Clarke, who designed Marlow Bridge, opened in 1832 also designed the larger scale Szechenyi chain bridge that spans the Danube linking the twin cities of Buda and Pest. They are in fact the only two surviving suspension bridges that Clarke built.

We hope you enjoy becoming part of the history of this beautiful building and have a wonderful stay and meal with us.
