

MAN DIES IN WORKPLACE ACCIDENT

A MAN HAS DIED AFTER BEING ELECTROCUTED AT A VICTORIA POINT WORK SITE

By Stephen Jeffery – July 15, 2013

The 25-year-old man, from Eudlo on the Sunshine Coast, is believed to have been working on the roof of the Adventist Aged Care Victoria Point Retirement Village at Clay Gully Road on Thursday afternoon when he suffered an electric shock.

Bystanders performed CPR (Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation) on the man until fire and ambulance crews arrived after 5.15 pm.

The man was unconscious and not breathing when emergency services arrived, but paramedics continued to administer CPR.

He was transported to Princess Alexandra Hospital in a critical condition, but was declared dead shortly after arriving.

A police spokesman said the death was not being treated as suspicious, but the coroner will conduct an investigation into the incident.

Workplace Health and Safety Queensland have also been called in to investigate the death.

A Department of Justice and Attorney-General spokeswoman confirmed investigations into the man’s death were ongoing, but was unable to provide further details about the case.

(Adapted from www.baysidebulletin.com.au)

I. Piccoli, HIGH TECH

WRITING

- Summarize the article above.

ACTIVITIES

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....

.....