

EUROPEAN

ARCHITECTURE

Nestlé Headquarters

The architectural design for the Nestlé Headquarters by Park Associati is based on an analytical approach to the articulated system of access to the Milanofiori Nord area, and the goal of integrating the building into the overall master plan. The building creates a visual continuity between the natural landscape to the north and the landscape of the site itself. The courtyard, reserved for users of the building, relates to the external landscape and is conceived as a kind of 'secret garden'. While the building appears compact and rational in plan, the elevations are articulated in a series of blocks allowing for a lighter and more fragmented composition. This is achieved by dividing the whole building into a number of segments that vary in size and height and each with a slightly inclined façade.

