

Field Museum, Chicago, Illinois, USA

Colors in the Rice Native Gardens

Laura Milkert
Field Museum

Photos: Laura Milkert, J&J Balaban, and John Weinstein. Produced by Alicia Diaz [adiaz@fieldmuseum.org]. Land Acknowledgement: The Field Museum acknowledges that it was built on the traditional homelands of the Bodéwadmik (Potawatomi), Hoocąk (Winnebago/Ho'Chunk), Jiwere (Otoe), Nutachi (Missouria), and Baxoje (Iowas); Kiash Matchitwuk (Menominee); Meshkwahkiha (Meskwaki); Asákiwaki (Sauk); Myaamiaki (Miami), Waayaahantwaki (Wea), and Peeyankhiškiaki (Piankashaw); Kiikaapoi (Kickapoo); Inoka (Illini Confederacy); Anishinaabeg (Ojibwe), and Odawak (Odawa). The Museum recognizes that the region we now call Chicago was the traditional homelands of many Indigenous nations, and remains home to diverse Native people today. The land we walk was and remains Native land.

© Field Museum (2023) CC BY-NC 4.0. Licensed works are free to use/share/remix with attribution, but commercial use of the original work is not permitted.

[fieldguides.fieldmuseum.org]

[1512] version 1 4/2023

The Field Museum invites you to awaken your senses as you venture through the Field Museum's Rice Native Gardens and experience the beautiful colors of the natural world. The Rice Native Gardens, surrounding the terraces of the Museum, highlight plants native to Northeast Illinois and have become an urban haven for people, butterflies, bees, wasps, birds, and other animals.

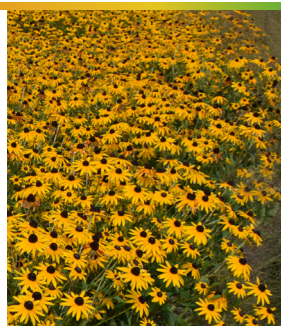

To learn more, visit shorturl.at/djuvH.

1 Cornus sericea
Red-osier dogwood

2 Danaus plexippus
Monarch butterfly

3 Rudbeckia fulgida
Black-eyed susan

4 Lupinus perennis
Blue lupine

5 Mertensia virginica
Virginia bluebells

6 Liatris aspera
Rough blazing star

7 Fragaria virginiana
Wild strawberry

8 Asclepias tuberosa
Butterfly weed

9 Solidago rugosa 'Fireworks'
Rough goldenrod

10 Pinus strobus 'blue shag'
Dwarf eastern white pine

11 Limenitis arthemis astyanax
Red-spotted purple

12 Tradescantia ohiensis
Spiderwort

The Rice Native Gardens, The Field Museum, Chicago, Illinois