Meghan Markle, the Duchess who has been under the spotlight since marrying Prince Harry in 2018, is once again at the centre of a heated discussion. Her newest Harper's Bazaar cover has pushed plastic surgery conversation right back into the spotlight.

Meghan Markle's Harper's Bazaar cover

Meghan's latest Harper's Bazaar cover showed her looking very different around her eyes, and this change immediately caught public attention. The former royal's eye area looked more lifted, open, and defined than before, and this wasn't simply due to minimal makeup, as explained by a top Beverly Hills plastic surgeon who compared the new photos with Meghan's 2022 cover for The Cut, where the first clear signs of change appeared.

Dr Raffi Hovsepian, a triple-board-certified plastic surgeon, examined photos from 2019 to 2022 and compared them with pictures from 2025. He told RadarOnline.com that the transformation stood out immediately. According to him, the "heaviness of her upper lids is no longer present."

He added that Meghan's "upper eyelid crease appears more defined, higher, and cleaner, while the skin between the crease and brow looks tighter and less hooded." Dr Hovsepian noted that this look is "very consistent" with procedures like upper blepharoplasty, the upper eyelid skin-pinch technique, and conservative fat pad reduction.

Why experts think surgery may be involved

Dr Hovsepian explained what made these changes so noticeable. He said, “Meghan’s recent photos show a noticeably more lifted, defined, and open upper eyelid area compared to her 2022 images.” He pointed out that the higher crease, tighter skin, and reduced hooding are the types of results seen after eyelid surgery.

He went on to say that her “eye shape now appears brighter, more sculpted, and more refreshed,” which is why the difference is clear when comparing recent pictures with older ones. The surgeon also noticed “midface refinements, smoother under-eye transitions, and improved brow support” that work together to give her a more polished look. He added that these changes are “aesthetic, cohesive, and professionally executed, but undeniably noticeable when placed side-by-side.”

Meghan Markle has not publicly confirmed undergoing any plastic surgery.

Meghan has never confirmed any procedures

Meghan Markle has not publicly confirmed undergoing any plastic surgery. Over the years, she has faced speculation about rhinoplasty, eyelid surgery, and even breast enhancement during her Deal or No Deal days, though some assume those changes may have been reversed. But Meghan herself has kept her stance simple.

In a 2015 interview with Porter magazine, she said she doesn't spend time worrying about these rumours. "I don't pay a lot of attention, frankly," she said when asked about cosmetic speculation.

Meghan Markle's appearance has changed over time, and her new photos have reopened the conversation once again. Whether the differences come from makeup, styling, or possible procedures, one thing has not changed: Meghan's evolving looks continue to spark curiosity.
