New Group Chief Executive for RACT

The RACT Board is delighted to announce the appointment of Mark Mugnaioni to the role of Group Chief Executive.

Mr Mugnaioni is currently the Chief Strategy Officer with Royal Automobile Club of Queensland (RACQ), Queensland's largest membership organisation, where he has worked for the past 13 years.

He has a sound understanding of RACT's commitment to serving its members, advocating on their behalf on mobility and road safety issues and striving to enhance the lives of all Tasmanians.

"Mark has played a critical lead role in RACQ's significant and successful transformational change, enhancing their members' experiences and ensuring the club's long-term sustainability," RACT President Kathryn Westwood said.

"He has a depth of experience in the auto club sector and is highly regarded for his strategic, commercial, legal and governance capabilities within large and complex organisations.

"He also has experience in a number of Non-Executive Director roles, including with the Queensland Tourism Industry Council.

"Mark will bring new leadership and perspective to the Group Chief Executive role as we continue to respond to rapidly changing mobility and business environments, as well as meeting the evolving expectations of our more than 190,000 members and customers."

Mr Mugnaioni's wife and three young children will also become new Tasmanians.

Mr Mugnaioni will commence in late October, succeeding Harvey Lennon, whose career with RACT has spanned 21 years, including almost 10 years as Group Chief Executive.
