

Victimless crime

Don't you usually walk home?

Usually, but I'm getting a lift today.

What are you doing this weekend?

Nothing.

You?

Not much. I've got some friends coming around mine later though.

Lucky. Your mum's always away.

Do you always get away with it?

Yeah. It's sound.

So what are you saying later then?

Free gaffe?

Maybe. How do I know you can hang?

Mate, I can hang.

Alright. Pass me that.

What?

Never mind.

Clearly too desperate in them DMs.

Yeah, your girlfriends.

Watch it.

I'm only having a laugh.

You're gonna have a laugh? Put that away then.

Did you see that?

Impressive.

What are you doing? Give it back, Jake!

Nah, this is going on your Instagram.

Our Noah thinks he's a big man.

But I think he's too afraid of what his mummy thinks.

What do you think, Noah?

Should we invite you to the party?

I think you should piss off.

Give me my phone!

Just give us a taste of how hard he is.

I knew it.

Weak.

Yeah, watch this then.

Noah?

No, what has he done?

He didn't mean to. It's not your men's fault.

It was our idea.

I'm getting out of here man.

Oh my god.

Hello? Yes, I need an ambulance and police as quick as you can.

I've got a woman on the bus with a head injury.

You alright love?

Yes, I'm alright.

Oh my god.

Are you alright?

I'll come in.

The construction on Main City Centre Road has been announced by the council today as a result of an increasing amount of fatalities reported over the past 24 months.

More on this over the coming week.

Hurry up!

I haven't spent an hour in the kitchen for nothing.

A mother and baby were victims in a brick-throwing incident.

The mother sustained a deep laceration to her head requiring stitches.

She's currently in hospital with a severe concussion.

The nine month old is uninjured.

But was deeply distressed by the incident.

Police are on the lookout for the suspects believed to be two teenage boys.

What's wrong?

Moving onto the weather, safe movements this afternoon with widespread threats from the odd sunny skies and a few isolated lights now as you can see.

Are you alright love?

Um... I'm not hungry.

Have those boys been picking on you again?

Good evening, did Noah Crosby live here?

Yeah, well I am his mum.

Sorry to be funny but it has been connected to a crime.

What?

He's committed a sin.

It's a serious offence.

He will need to be arrested and interviewed.

You've got the wrong lad.

We need to enter the building please.

Noah?

What's going on?

The police are here.

Sorry, I'm sorry.

Tell me what have you done?

Noah Croft, you're under arrest on suspicion of section 18 assault and criminal damage.

You do not have to say anything but it may harm your defence if you do not mention one question or something...

Get off me!

My son is a boy!

Anything you do say may be given in evidence.

It was an incident move!

What's the necessity of your arrest for a productive investigation?

You can meet us down at the station.

Noah, I'd like to point out that this interview has been recorded and will be used for evidence in court.

Did you throw a brick that injured a woman this afternoon on Greenway Road?

No.

The evidence against you is clear so I'm going to give you another chance to be honest.

Did you throw the brick that injured this woman?

I did.

Why did you do it?

Did you intend to harm anyone?

No.

Oh, I didn't.

I didn't, I swear I didn't mum!

A mother's had to have stitches in her head.

She has a severe concussion and will have permanent scars both physical and mental.

Christ...

Not to mention the trauma caused to the baby.

If that brick had gone into the pram you and I might be sat here talking about a murder charge.

And the bus driver is likely he'll end up with PTSD.

The bus window you shattered will cost £1,000.

Your mum will be responsible for that if you can't afford to pay.

No, I'll pay for it.

I'll pay for it mum, I-I'll pay for it.

With what money Noah?

I think you need to realise the seriousness of your actions.

The damage is already done.

Can I please go to the bathroom?

Yep.

Well let's call you back to your cell.

Oh no...

Come on, there's a day everywhere.

Just calling to see where you are.

Max has been asking for Uncle Mark so just want to get an ETA from you.

Alright, see ya later.

Hi, where are you?

The party started an hour ago.

This is a bit ridiculous.

Can you at least call me back?

Bye.

Mark, I don't know whether to be absolutely fuming at you or worried.

You've missed the entire party.

Max isn't here and I've heard nothing back from you.

Call me back.

I'm in hospital because I honestly don't know what to say to you right now.

I'm so sorry Sarah...

Oh, so you can pick up the phone then.

Listen-

No, I don't want to hear it.

I just put Max to bed.

You try explaining to a six year old why his uncle didn't bother showing up to his birthday party.

I know.

What's going on?

It was so awful, Sarah.

What happened?

Some stupid kid threw a brick through the window of the bus.

I thought it was just broken glass at first but...

Oh Jesus!

It almost hit a baby.

The brick.

And I had to pull glass out of the pram.

There was blood everywhere.

Paul-

Just come back from the police station and I had to give a statement and-

Assumed?

No, no.

It's not your fault.

I should have called that-

He'll understand.

I feel awful.

Look, I'll make it up to Max.

I will.

We'll figure something out.

We can do a little get together over the weekend or something?

Yeah.

Are you alright?

No, not really to be honest.

I don't really know what to make of it all.

I'm supposed to be back at work tomorrow but...

Surely they'll give you a few days off.

Well that's not how it works unfortunately.

Well pop the kettle on and just try not to think about it.

Alright?

I'll call you tomorrow and we can make some plans with Maxi.

Yeah?

Yeah.

Take care of yourself.

Thanks.

Bye.

It's an accident mate!

You should give me my phone back Jake.

Nah nah, you think you're a big man.

Shall we invite you to that party tonight?

What do you think Noah?

I think you should piss off.

Give me my phone.

Go up.

I dare ya.

I knew you wouldn't.

See ya later.

Bonne.
