Options for Facial Revolumization

Facial volume loss happens naturally as we age. It's caused by factors like reduced collagen, changes in fat distribution, bone density loss, gravity, sun damage, and lifestyle habits. These factors lead to a decrease in skin firmness and fullness, causing the face to appear aged.

Uncover the different treatment options for revolumizing the face and achieving results that exude natural beauty.

Surgical Facial Fat Transfer

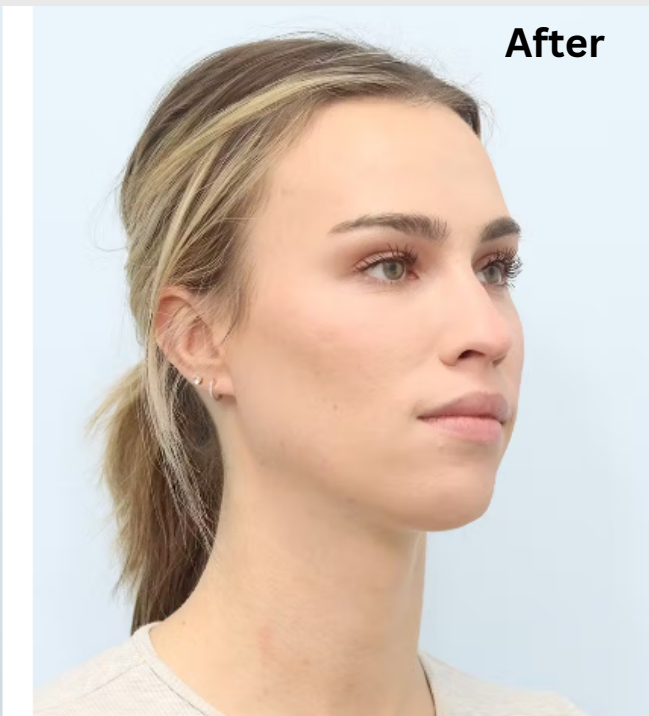

How it works

- Fat cells are taken from areas like your belly or thighs, purified, and prepared for transfer.
- The purified and micronized fat cells are strategically injected into your face to restore volume and rejuvenate your appearance.
- Surgery can be done in-clinic under local anesthetic

Dermal Filler SCULPTRA

What's Sculptra? Sculptra is a dermal filler made from poly-L-lactic acid, a biocompatible and biodegradable synthetic material.

How does Sculptra work? Sculptra works by stimulating the body's natural collagen production. When injected into the skin, Sculptra acts as a support, encouraging the growth of new collagen fibers. Over time, this increase in collagen helps restore facial volume, filling in wrinkles and fine lines, and improving overall skin texture. The gradual buildup of collagen results in a natural-looking results that lasts for an extended period, in some individuals it can last up to two years.
