Celebrating 4 years of That Face

A Personal Note from Dr. Sulyman-Scott

My path into medicine began in nursing, but I always knew it was only the beginning of a much larger calling. I had a deep desire to become a physician, which led me into Otolaryngology-Head and Neck Surgery, and ultimately, into facial plastic surgery.

What I value most in my work is the ability to help patients feel more confident and to see themselves in a more positive light. There is something incredibly meaningful about guiding someone to appreciate their own beautiful features in a way that feels authentic to them. I've always been drawn to the intricacies of facial anatomy, the balance, the precision, and the artistry that allow for results that are both subtle, natural and impactful.

I remain committed to continuing my growth as a surgeon, business owner, educator, mentor and woman. For my patients, this means every treatment will continue to be approached with care, intention, and a commitment to results that feel natural, refined, and true to you.

Thank you for placing your trust in me and for being part of the growth of That Face practice.

The That Face Experience

From the moment you walk in, many new patients say the same thing, “wow, this office is beautiful.” Between the weekly fresh flowers, complimentary snacks and drinks, and the overall atmosphere, we want your experience to feel welcoming and elevated from the start.

As patients continue to visit, we often hear something else, “am I the only one here?” or “are you guys ever busy?” The truth is, more often than not, you are the only one here, and that is intentional.

The That Face Experience

Our schedule is designed to create a more private, personalized, and unhurried experience. We do not aim to feel busy. We aim to be present!

We create space so each patient receives the time and attention they deserve. Dr. Sulyman-Scott values being fully present, and we believe your care should reflect that.

We take the time to listen, plan thoughtfully, and provide care without rushing. Every detail of your visit is meant to feel considered, comfortable, and centered around you.

To us, you are more than a patient. We value your trust and encourage open communication so your questions and concerns are always heard.

Our goal is simple, for you to feel beautiful, confident, informed, and truly cared for.

Why We Take Photos (📷 Yes... Every Time)

One of our favorite things to say is, “okay, I’m ready for you... let’s take your photos,” and patients usually respond with, “yes, my favorite part,” 😊 with a little sarcasm.

But they truly are one of the most important tools we have.

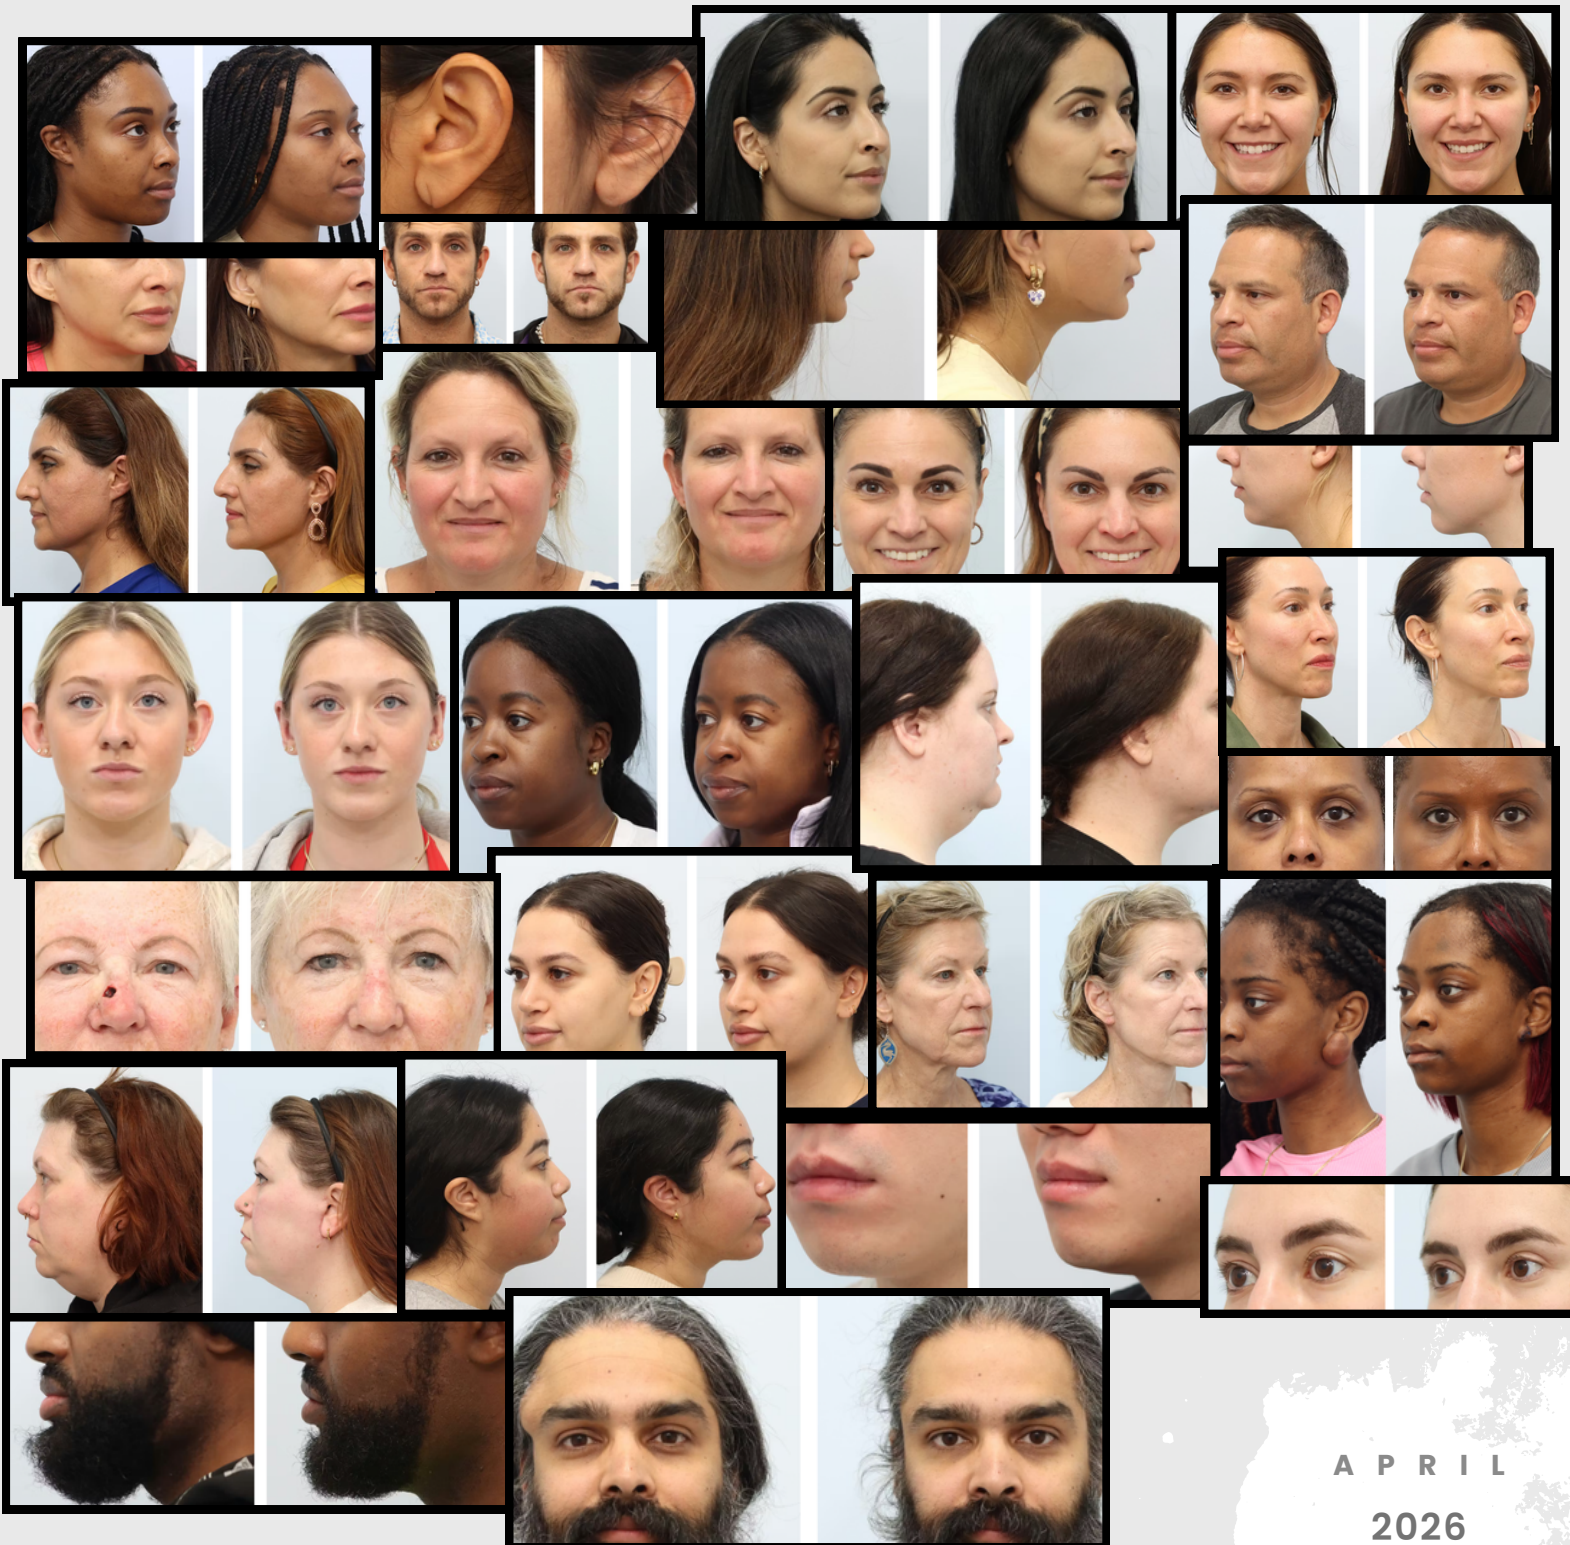

Photos allow us to track your progress together and really see how your results are evolving over time. It is easy to forget where you started, and those subtle, natural changes can go unnoticed without something to look back on.

They also help us make thoughtful decisions about your care, whether something is working well or if it is time to adjust your treatment plan.

With Gratitude

We also want to sincerely thank the patients who, over the past four years, have kindly allowed us to share their before and after photos. Your willingness to share has helped other patients feel more confident in making their own aesthetic decisions.
