YABUN Indigenous Survival concert at Victoria Park on Australia Day was a great vibe with music by Dan Sultan, Jessica Mauboy, Archie Roach, Christine Anu and all-day dancing on the youth stage.

People came from far and wide to share a picnic blanket and relax under the sultry skies.

Meanwhile, it is good to know that kids under the age of 12 can legally ride bikes on the footpath. Of course, adults can too where the footpath is a designated shared path or when they are accompanying kids under the age of 12.

Shared pathways are a great idea. It's true that cyclists need to maintain a polite speed and learn to safely give way to pedestrians without freaking anyone out or making it feel unsafe to walk on the footpath (see the story on page 5).

If you've never visited the Police Museum near Circular Quay, it's spooky. Sometimes it seems that things haven't changed that much since white people first began to roam the streets of Sydney (story on page 9).

Our second round of Project Local starts this month. Send in your ideas and get your supporters to vote (page 14).

Cinema Alley in Haymarket should be a nice night out, if it doesn't rain. Video works from China and Australia are presented across two screens next to Gallery 4A in a closed-off street (page 22).

Sydney Shakespeare Festival

"This most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire..." Hamlet's words might equally apply to Bicentennial Park on a good evening. Glebe's waterside park is currently the living set for two of the Bard's most-loved works, which are performed on alternate evenings.

Raucous battle of the sexes The Taming of the Shrew is our pick for family-friendly fun, while epic tragedy Hamlet will be the go if you're after more heavy-hitting fare packed with famous quotations.

The festival's talented cast will be under the direction of Julie Baz, who has been heavily involved in the event since it started five years ago. With spectacular views of the harbour and city skyline, the park also presents itself as a homage of sorts to the open-air Globe Theatre in London where many of Shakespeare's plays had their first performances. Sessions are BYO, so pack a picnic and a blanket, pour yourself a drink, relax and be entertained. Bicentennial Park, 2a Chapman Rd, Glebe Foreshore, Annandale 2038. (www.sydneyshakespearerefestival.com.au). Until 12 Feb. Thu-Sun, 8pm. $17-$29; free for children under 12, those 65 and over, and people with disabilities.

The great outdoors

Summer has finely arrived, so make the most of the fine weather – it might be fleeting – and head outside for talks, tours, theatre and art this month. By Stuart Holmes

Cinema Alley: Double Vision

4A, the awesome contemporary Asian gallery-cum-performance space in Chinatown, is once again producing its annual outdoor cinema event. And this time, much of the programme is in double-vision.

Cinema Alley, a temporary screening space in Haymarket's Parker Street, has been popping up for the last three years to show video art and contemporary films relating to Asian culture. The twist this year is that alongside the single-channel screenings, there'll also be a line-up of two-channel works, which will be shown on two screens simultaneously. Here, images will be layered and synthesised into new meanings to create an unconventional cinematic experience.

The unique event will be the perfect way to usher in the Year of the Dragon as the precinct celebrates Chinese New Year. Bookings essential. Parker St, Haymarket 2000. (www.4a.com.au/cinema-alley-2012). Fri 3 Feb, 7pm. FREE.

Chinese New Year tours

Continuing on theme, landscape architect Peter Nowland will give an architectural talk explaining the significance of the tranquil Chinese Garden of Friendship. Nowland will discuss the design and history of the popular tourist attraction and explain the challenges that lie ahead in maintaining its beauty.

Chinese Garden of Friendship, Darling Harbour 2000. (www.darlingharbour.com). Wed 1 Feb, 2pm. $3-$6 (includes garden entry).

You can also discover Chinatown's hidden past during a series of informative and entertaining Chinese New Year tours run by the Haymarket Chamber of Commerce. Learn the history of one of Sydney's most eye-catching precincts, and gain insights on the people and cultures that shaped it. Tour will depart from McDonald's, Harbour St, Sydney 2000. (www.sydneychinesenewyear.com). Until 4 Feb, 10.30am–12.30pm. Gold coin donation; optional Yum Cha $18pp.

4A CINEMA ALLEY DOUBLE VISION

"Cinema Alley is based on old fashioned street cinemas, which would bring the community together to show current news and ideas. We transform Parker Street in Chinatown as a setting for showing some of the most up to date video art from the region," says 4A Gallery director Aaron Seeto.

"Chinatown is undergoing so many shifts at the moment, it is a gateway to other Asian cultures and so through events such as Cinema Alley we hope to bring better awareness of contemporary art and culture of the Asian region to our diverse Australian community."

This year's incarnation – the 4th since inception in 2009 – promises to do just that, with an exciting array of single and two-channel video works streamed across a double screen set up in the alley, from artists as diverse as Hiwa K, Liang Wei, Peter Aiwast and Kiran Subbaiah. You really won't know where to look – whether it's the moonlike landscapes, floating clouds or writhing underwater dragons on-screen, or the buzzing bar to the side. Either way, win-win. (AB)

EDITOR'S NOTE

Issue 124. January 31 - February 6, 2012.

Tuesday. What a limp addition to the working week. At least Monday has the fortitude to be truly depressing - a day when we all feel united in our misery. Or Wednesday, which has the good humour to call itself 'hump day' and the good sense to usher in the home stretch to the weekend. Tuesday – neither the beginning nor the end – offers up nothing more than mediocrity. Like white flour with absolutely no flavour or nutritional value of its own, Tuesday is merely a filler, a binding agent. But if, like me, your experience of Tuesday has been like chewing on raw dough, you're about to be pleasantly surprised.

The Australian Museum has once again rescued Tuesday from the Siberia of the social calendar with Jurassic Lounge 2012. A mash-up of performance art, circus acts, taxidermy, video works and boutique beers, Jurassic lounge invites you to get prehistoric on a night usually reserved for takeout and crime TV. But the main advantage of sprucing up your Tuesday is that it makes the rest of the week look more interesting, kind of like having one really hot friend. Carriageworks launches into 2012 with a retrospective and a nod to the Chinese new year, Alaska proves just how cool it can be, 4A transforms into a cinema alley, and Goodgod's calling all cats to come on down.

Independent studies have shown that the more socially engaged you are on a Tuesday the higher your chances of living an inspiring life [Source: 2012 survey of the 3 people currently sitting in this here room]. So don't let it lie to waste!

Having double vision is a skill rather than a weakness at this year's Cinema Alley. The annual one-night street screening of video artwork presented by 4A gallery returns to Chinatown on Friday with a lineup of two channel (two screen) works playing alongside the standard single channel screenings.

The unique event takes place as part of Sydney's Chinese New Year celebrations, presenting films from both Australia and Asia. Going beyond the project's usual aim to generate discussions relating to contemporary Asian culture in the city, it will encourage viewers to experience film in a different way. Through layering and collision of moving images, what will (hopefully) result is an enriched cinematic experience through the generation of new meanings.

The bar opens at 7pm for an 8pm screening, though if you have enough trouble trying to focus on a movie while simultaneously checking your Facebook it's probably a good idea to go easy on the beers. And though it's a free event it has proven to be rather popular, so secure your seat early.

Cinema Alley, 4A's annual one-night only, street screening of video artwork, returns with Double Vision – a lineup of two-channel (two screen) and single-channel video works from Australia and Asia.

Presented across two screens to create a layering and collision of images, the moving image will be experienced in renewed ways, generalising different experiences from conventional cinematic narrative.

Join in the festive spirit as 4A welcomes in the Chinese New Year. Situated on Parker Street in the heart of Sydney's vibrant Chinatown precinct, this is a unique Sydney event.

Since its inception in 2009, this unique project has proven to be a popular event, attracting new audiences to the contemporary visual arts, and generating discussions relating to contemporary Asian culture in the city.

Screening includes works by Apichatpong Weerasethakul, Peter Aiswast, Hiwa K., Nasim Nasirfang Wei, Miao Xidichun, Jun Nguyen-Hatsushiba, Kiran Subbaiah + selections from the 4A animation project.

They hung out a lot at Suppy round the corner last time they were here.

当代录像、数码影像、艺术电影……可能你会有很多种方式来描述它,不变的是艺术家用移动影像的方式来表达极富思想性的含义,而在“小巷电影院”里,所要表达的正是来自亚太地区最新的视觉文化。你,准备好了吗?

“小巷电影院”

一桌当代亚洲影像文化的新年特餐

4A Centre for Contemporary Asian Art Presents Cinema Alley

正值中国农历新年,4A 亚洲当代艺术中心“小巷电影院”将再次出现在中国城中心的 Parker St 街头,为悉尼观众献上来自中国、泰国、越南以及伊拉克和伊朗等地艺术家的重要艺术电影作品。

艺术中心总监 Aaron Seeto 说,“小巷电影院旨在向悉尼多元文化的本地观众介绍当代亚洲影像文化,在亚太地区引起深层次的文化讨论和关注。今年参展作品来自戛纳获奖导演

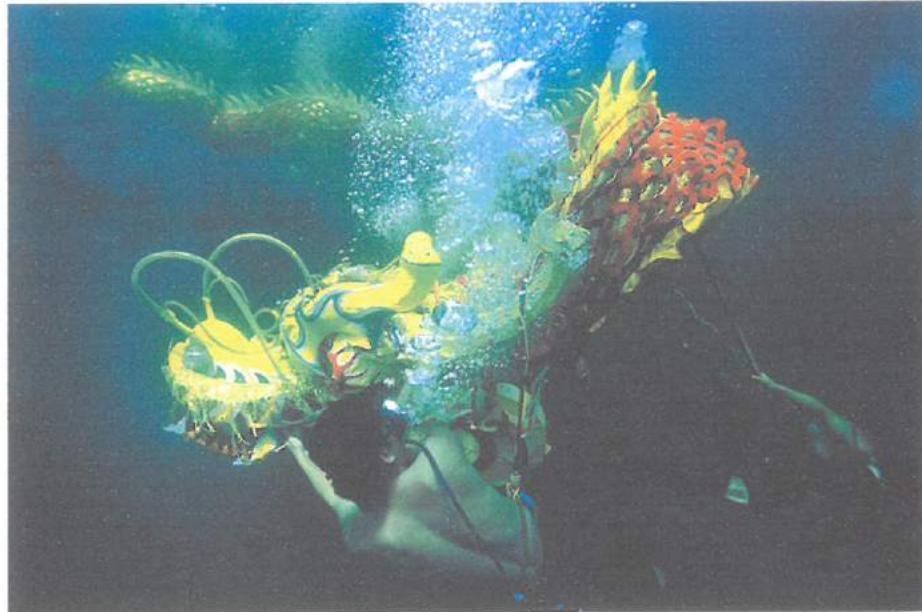

Apitchatpong Weeresethakul、中国新媒体艺术家缪小春以及澳大利亚本土的 Peter Alwast 和 Nasim Nasr 等。”

600 座的露天影院每年都吸引着悉尼多元文化背景的观众,大家齐聚中国城中心的 Parker St 上体验当代亚洲艺术电影的魅力。今年艺术中心还特别采用了“双重视觉”的独特形式,将极富思想性的艺术电影同时在两块大屏幕上放映,视觉的重叠和重

构必将带来全新的影院体验。

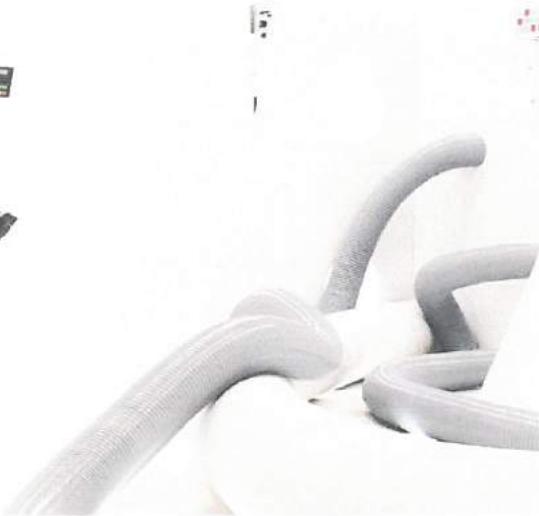

悉尼小巷酒吧 Grasshopper 和 Kirin 啤酒也将再度与艺术中心携手为现场观众提供美食和美酒。“小巷电影院”也是 2012 年悉尼市政府中国农历新年的庆祝活动之一。

最后提示一下,小巷电影院是免费的公众活动,但须提前预约。由于座位数有限,每年这仅此一场的露天影院都被提前预订一空,所以预订要提早哦。
