DEXTER-SOUTHFIELD

Hit the Freedom Trail

A little Revolutionary War history came to the Dexter-Southfield School recently, as the Freedom Trail Players brought an interactive program where students could "re-enact" events leading up to the War for Independence. This program, presented by the Freedom Trail Foundation, provides educational experiences to school-age children throughout Massachusetts.

From left: Dexter-Southfield's third-grade students Hadrian Mitrovoic, Anne Mosen, Helen Concoran, and Macy Watts portray British soldiers poised to confront Boston colonists, as portrayed by their classmates, Andrea Mallory, Tonye Ojuka and Bradford Adams in a re-enactment of the Boston Massacre during the Freedom Trail Scholars Program, alongside Freedom Trail Players Tim Hoover and Arielle Kaplan. Share your February vacation photos

Winter school break is here and Wicked Local wants your February vacation or stay-cation photos.

Whether you're heading to the mountains to play in the snow, a tropical destination to play in the sun, or finding fun things to do on day trips closer to home, capture the fun on camera and share your winter vacation photos with us.

Email photos as JPEG attachments to brookline@wickedlocal.com. Please include a caption identifying people pictured, the town they are from and the location where the photo was taken. We'll post your February vacation photos in online galleries on your Wicked Local website and print them in your weekly newspaper.
