

How Can Art Help You in Your Career?

Makes you a creative thinker

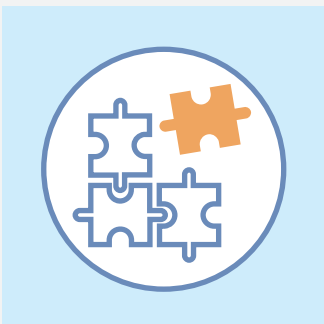

Unlocking your creativity through art will help you to 'think outside the box' and give you the ability to think on your feet.

Makes you more resilient

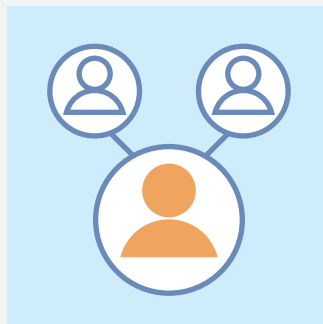

Through studying art you will learn to take on constructive feedback and understand where perseverance can get you.

Makes you a better problem-solver

Your creative thinking will help you find creative solutions to problems and even find new ways to drive a business forward.

Makes you a great team player

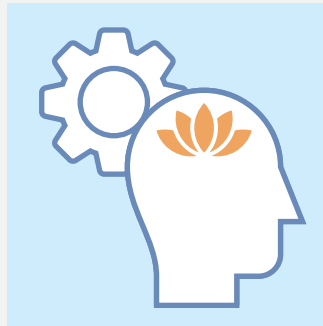

During your art studies, you'll have the opportunity to work collaboratively, learning to value and respect the opinions of others.

Makes you more open-minded

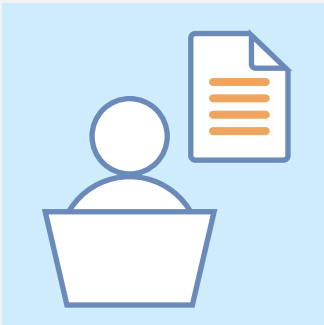

Through your study of art, you'll gain an understanding and respect of the many different ways that people see the world.

Develops stress management techniques

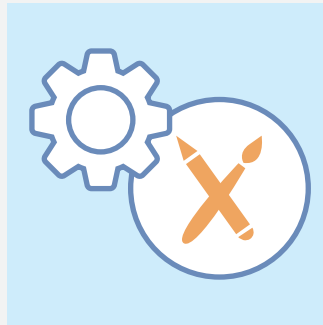

Studying art will help you to develop stress management techniques which are so important for your wellbeing at work.

Develops ability to work to a brief

Throughout your art studies you will be required to work to a brief. This is an incredibly useful skill for many exciting careers!

Develops design skills

Of course, art will give you design skills that can open up some really exciting careers for you!

Makes you more focused

Art will teach you to focus on a task despite distractions. This is a rare and useful skill to have in any role.

Can earn you a higher salary!

All of these are sought-after skills and attributes, so your art studies could ultimately help you earn a higher salary!