Message from the Guest Editors

If it wasn't clear before, it is certainly evident today that the future of humankind is conditional. "Progress" has long been a contested term, but it has now become firmly associated with the road to devastation for humankind and many other species. Consequently, contemporary alarmism over global warming is certainly justified and called for, and yet there is something strange within such reactions.

This Special Issue will be wide-ranging and open when it comes to historical boundaries and theoretical preferences. The common aspect is the ambition to uncover alternatives to the rationality, subjectivity, activity, and modernity that we are all products of, but that nonetheless are not natural, but rather products of history. We imagine a Special Issue consisting of a number of empirically well-informed readings, combined with theoretical discussions relating to the Anthropocene. Please feel free to contact us with any questions regarding this Special Issue.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

We welcome contributions that address fundamental issues in the Humanities from any meaningful perspective, combining past and present concerns in order to blaze a path toward the future. Interdisciplinary approaches are particularly welcome. All submissions will be critically reviewed by peers, aiming for the highest possible scholarly level. Being an online journal, the published papers will reach their desired audiences faster, more reliably, and much more easily than traditional print versions, while upholding the same, if not even higher, scholarly standards.

Author Benefits

Open Access:— free for readers, with article processing charges \(APC\) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within ESCI \(Web of Science\), ERIH Plus, and many other databases.

Rapid Publication: manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision provided to authors approximately 24.4 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 5.6 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the first half of 2021).
