The course, 18 holes - Par 71, measures 6,192 meters and offers a great variety of designs, in the constant search for perfect harmony between the natural characteristics of the terrain and the modalities of the shots. He therefore urges the players to use all fourteen irons and woods in the bag. The grass of the fairways, an American bermuda seed, strong and compact, guarantees excellent surface floatation of the ball for an always clean and sharp shot. At the sides, a mix of four types of fescue sways at natural height. For the greens, the two varieties A4 and A1 of agrostis stolonifera palustris were used: a composition that boasts approximately double the number of stems in the grassy brush compared to common pennncross ones.
