

Altkin launches a range dedicated to the maintenance and servicing of printing systems

Altkin, an ARMOR GROUP company, announces the launch of its range of products and accessories for the servicing and maintenance of printing systems. The European leader in alternative printing is thus strengthening its range of services, becoming a single point of contact and supplier for all corporate printing needs.

Altkin is expanding its range of products for corporate printing with a line of accessories and products dedicated to the care and maintenance of printing systems such as printers and multifunction devices. Comprising 19 items – cleaning spray, protective lubricating oil, industrial glue, label remover, microfibre cloths, vacuum cleaner, etc. – it includes all the products technicians need to prevent technical incidents, provide long-lasting protection for components and thoroughly clean parts and surfaces.

"As a company committed to sustainable models, we work every day to extend the life of printing consumables as well as printers and multifunction devices used in businesses. With this range dedicated to their care and maintenance, we are continuing this approach by seeking to extend their lifespan. This is perfectly in line with our DNA, alongside our range of remanufactured consumables and our printer fleet management solution, Dyalog," explains Laura Bretaudeau, Product Manager at Altkin.

With this new product range, Altkin is strengthening its position as a one-stop shop for all printing needs. It offers more than 3,000 references for A4/A3 toner, inkjet and large format consumables, spare parts, a wide range of Managed Print Services (MPS) such as fleet management and cloud solutions, and now supplies for servicing and maintenance.

"We are convinced that this one-stop shop model meets a real need. In particular, it meets the needs of CIOs who want to simplify their purchasing processes in order to refocus their efforts on projects with high added value for their companies," concludes Laura Bretaudeau.
