

All-natural Whole Peppercorns

Black Peppercorns

Black peppercorns are left on the vine to fully mature, then are picked and dried in the sun or blanched before drying. They have a strong spicy flavor due to the presence of the chemical piperine and varying amounts of essential oil.

Green Peppercorns

Green peppercorns are harvested while immature and unripe, then either air-dried, freeze-dried. They're aromatic, with a fresher, fruitier flavor than white or black pepper, but not nearly as sharp and astringent as black.

White Peppercorns

White peppercorns are the seeds of black peppercorns, soaked to remove the dark colored casings before drying. The resulting flavor is hotter and more pungent than black peppercorns, with a slightly fermented odor.

PEPPERCORNS

Szechuan Peppercorns

Unrelated to the pepper family, these are the berries of a prickly ash tree, native to the Szechuan province of southwest China. When chewed they cause a numbing sensation on the tongue. Szechuan pepper is very aromatic, with a scent of anise and a sweet fresh citrus flavor.

Rainbow Peppercorns

Our rainbow peppercorn mix is a four-pepper blend of black, white, green, and pink peppercorns. Rainbow pepper is a colorful way to enjoy the flavors from a combination of peppercorns, adding heat and flavor to a multitude of recipes.

Pink Peppercorns

Not peppercorns at all, but the berries of the shrub originated in Peru. Although mild and sweet, they are quite pungent but not peppery. They are very fruity and sweet with spiciness and flavors of juniper, aniseed and pine.

Specifications

Black, white, and green peppercorns all come from the same vine, but are harvested at various stages of growth. Sweet and spicy pink peppercorns are dried berries from South America. Chinese Szechuan peppercorns have a distinctly pungent and spicy flavor.
