

CHILI PEPPERS

All-natural Hot Chili Peppers

Cayenne Pepper

Cayenne chilies are usually sold as a powder. The word cayenne comes from the city of Cayenne in French Guiana. Cayenne is great in soups and sauces, on pizzas, as well as over meats and seafoods. 30,000 to 50,000 Scoville hot units.

Ancho Chili Pepper

Ancho Chili is a dark smoky chili with a deep rich flavor and mild to medium heat. Their flavor is somewhat sweet and a little raisin like. When fresh they are referred to as poblanos. 1,000 to 1,500 Scoville heat units.

Chipotle Chili Pepper

A chipotle pepper is a smoked, dried jalapeno. As they turn red on the vine, they are plucked and smoked until dried, turning them into chipotle peppers. 2,500 to 8,000 Scoville hot units.

Jalapeno Pepper

A jalapeno pepper is a fruit of the Capsicum pod type. While originating in Mexico, it is now grown worldwide for its popular flavor and mild heat level, which averages around 5,000 Scoville Heat Units. That is hot, but not too hot.

Paprika

It is made of a combination of dried peppers from the Capsicum annum family, then grinding them to a fine, rich red powder. Its flavor varies from mild to pretty robust, but it's never as hot as chili or cayenne, its main purpose is to add flavor and color, more than heat. 250 to 1,000 Scoville heat units.

Red Pepper

Red pepper flakes are made from a mix of peppers from the Capsicum annum family, mostly Cayenne. Seeds are there to add spiciness. The primary use is to achieve heat. 30,000–50,000 Scoville heat units.

Specifications

Chili Peppers are widely used in many cuisines as a spice to add flavor and heat to various dishes. Chili Peppers can be eaten fresh or added whole to your food. When dried they can be finely ground into chili powder for use with barbecue, hot curry, and other spicy sauces.
