Objectives

The aim of the seminar is to analyze the foundations and the latest developments in competition economics, both from a theoretical perspective and from the analysis of recent case-law. The seminar is divided in two parts: The first 5 sessions provide a review of the theoretical foundations of the economics of competition with a special focus on its practical implementation. The second part will be devoted to the analysis and discussion of recent competition cases by practitioners from competition authorities, law firms and economic consulting firms. The closing lecture will analyze the current and future challenges for competition policy.
